City endorses innkeeper’s tax increase

BY MARK CAMPBELL
Madison City Council adopted a resolution on Tuesday endorsing a 3% increase in Jefferson County’s innkeeper’s tax with a stipulation that a portion of that revenue be earmarked for projects that grow tourism by developing infrastructure.
The tax increase, which will up the user fee on hotel rooms and short term rentals like Air bnbs from 5% to 8% until at least Dec. 31, 2045, was approved by the Indiana General Assembly during its most recent legislative session, signed by Gov. Eric Holcomb, and is ready to be implemented upon final adoption locally by the Jefferson County Council. City council, which has supported the increase as a way to generate more funds for growing tourism and developing infrastructure that benefits tourism and local residents, gave its endorsement for the county council to do that Tuesday night.
According to Visit Madison

Inc. Executive Tourism Director Andrew Forrester, based on current innkeeper’s tax receipts, the 3% increase is likely to generate about $250,000 more dollars annually from a local tourism industry that is experiencing record growth.
“You’ve been talking about this before I came on board,” Forrester said at Tuesday’s meeting. “There’s a lot of projects we’re trying to do ... and if we are going to continue to support them we need the funds to do that.”
“To grow requires a tremendous amount of capital,” Mayor Bob Courtney said in agreement.

MADISON IN BLOOM

Garden tour to feature 7 private gardens next 2 weekends

BY BOB DEMAREE
Madison in Bloom is back with seven private gardens to tour in downtown Madison over the next two weekends — June 8-9 and June 15-16.
The tour, organized by the Jefferson County Historical Society (JCHS) and now in its 30th year, have held biennially in recent years. Tours will run 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Saturday dates and noon to 4 p.m. on the Sunday dates.
John Nyberg, JCHS executive director, said the garden tour offers a unique experience that goes beyond the historic architecture most tours focus on in Madison.
“It’s another level of having a different experience in the historic district,” Nyberg said.

“You’re walking among the architecture, but this time it’s not about the house, it’s about the garden. It’s amazing what people can do” in creating gardens that are fun and interesting.
The garden tour serves as a fund-raiser for the Jefferson County Historical Society but it’s also a tourist attraction for the entire community. “The majority of the people who attend are from out of town. Eighty% of the people are not from Jefferson County,” said Nyberg, noting patrons come from Louisville, Cincinnati and Indianapolis as well as northern and southern Indiana, and other places throughout the region.
This year’s tour stops include:
• 610 East Second Street, the home of Margo and Jim Olson
• 733 West Main Street, the home of Tammy and Mayor Bob Courtney
• 126 East Street, the home of Randy Lakeman and Mark Cooley
• 317 West Third Street, the home of Sandy and Jim Dierdorf

- 420 Elm Street, the home of Linda and Mike Pittman
- 424 East Fourth Street, the home of Linda and Jim Wenning
- 316 Walnut Street, the home of Brad Miller and David Powell.

“I’m just so thankful that they offered up their gardens,” said Nyberg, crediting Thomas Stark and Sally McWilliams for their work recruiting gardens for the tour.
Tickets cost $30 and are good for both weekends, which Nyberg said allows more options to the see the gardens and adjust to whatever might happen with the weather. “We have two weekends, and four days,” he said. “If looks like it’s going be raining one particular day, you have got another option” for another day.
Tickets can be purchased online at madisoninbloom.com or at the Jefferson County History and Art Center, 615 West First Street, which is headquarters for the tour. Children 12 and under are free. The tour is not handicap accessible.

When asked about the future of Madison’s burgeoning music scene, Rohlfling’s answer came quickly: “Madison is embracing it’s music tourism economy” and can become a major asset for the region by drawing repeat visitors, more overnight stays and increasing the dollars spent per person, Rohlfling asserted.

Company works with Kysoc to improve braille trail

BY TAYLOR WILLIAMS
PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

Carrollton’s Cabot Corporation has teamed up with Carroll County’s Kysoc Park to improve the braille trail used by visually impaired hikers and walkers by smoothing pathways and providing new signage.

Late last month a group from the company worked with Gail Becraft, director of Kysoc’s Nature Center, to improve the trail at the county-owned park, working for hours laying and smoothing gravel and erecting braille signage. Becraft said the enthusiastic group made the project easy and the volunteers were “jovial and flexible.”

She explained the improvements were needed because the trail had developed uneven spots that make use difficult for those visually impaired. “They might trip on or it wouldn’t be as easy to navigate,” she said, adding there were also other issues like infiltration of roots and muddy areas.

In addition to providing manpower, Cabot also donated about $2,500 to pay for adding the braille signage along the path to help guide visually impaired hikers throughout the park by letting them know what’s ahead, the length of the trail, distance left and more.

Becraft thinks the improvements will make the park more attractive and user friendly to visually impaired hikers as well as the general public. “The more you make it accessible for the visitors, the better,” she noted.

She hopes to have an opening ceremony for the new braille trail on June 18 and also unveil Kysoc’s new pollinator garden that is located alongside the trail.

Aaron Courtney, lead lab technician for Cabot Corporation in Carrollton, spreads and levels gravel with a rake while helping to improve the braille trail at Carroll County’s Kysoc Park. The company provided manpower and funding to groom the trail and provide new signage to make the trail more user friendly for vision-impaired hikers and other park users.

ship with Cabot began in 2023 when the company, a Cap and Trade company was looking for local projects that served that purpose, reached out to Becraft wanting to donate money for Camp Kysoc that was used to create three scholarships.

She noted the company, which participates in Global Sustainability Day, is “trying to be pro-actively environmentally responsible ... They’re looking for ways that they can possibly get involved in the community through volunteering and potentially donating funds.”

Cabot again reached out to Becraft again this year and asked how they could help. She gave them a list of things that needed to be worked and improved upon, which included the braille path.

Becraft said Cabot’s Administrative Coordinator Whitney Long visited the camp, offering to “bring a crew out ... and help with manicuring the braille trail.” She also offered to sponsor some signage for the trail, contributing enough money to buy the five signs that are placed along the trail.

Camp Kysoc opened its braille path about two summers ago to create a path that makes exploring the camp more accessible to the visually impaired. There are posts connected by rope that users can hold onto while navigating the trail in order to remain on the path.

The braille trail begins at the camp’s parking lot and runs to the Nature Center before continuing about a half mile into a wooded area running parallel to the lake. The trail essentially loops around in a circle until arriving back at the half mile marker near the Nature Center.

TAX

The new funds, which the county would likely begin collecting on Jan. 1, 2025, would be reinvested in the tourism industry for everything from infrastructure and programs to the numerous events that draw tourists to Madison’s hotels throughout the year. Courtney said local residents should also benefit from that investment and growth from the dollars tourists spend, jobs created and investment in projects like sidewalks, streets, parks and public transportation that are essential to tourism but also improve the quality of life for residents.

Council president Carla Krebs said she supports the tax increase but asked that the city benefit from some of the funds generated by the higher room fees. “I’d like to see your group set aside some of those funds for city council projects,” said Krebs, noting the city is already investing in tourism and could use some of those funds to advance that effort in a way that would impact Madison for decades to come rather than a tourism season.

According to Forrester, the proposal the Jefferson County Board of Tourism (JCBT) will put before county council will suggest that 18.75% of the new revenue “be committed to capital projects as determined by the board of tourism ... projects that will last multiple years.”

“For the local economy it’s a win-win,” said Councilman Jim Bartlett, who also serves on JCBT.

Council member Lucy Dattilo, a former VMI board president who is now a VMI staff member, said the tax increase is long overdue. “We talked about raising that tax 15 years ago,” Dattilo said, noting the revenue lost during that span could have been growing tourism.

Courtney said the last time the tax was actually increased was in 1987 and the city and county have invested millions in tourism since then that could have been accomplished with less impact on local taxpayers.

“Look at the investment since then,” Courtney said of the last increase. “We’re all in favor of it because there are going to be more opportunities.”

In other business, the council:

- Heard the first reading of an ordinance establishing an Indiana Destination Development Corporation Control Fund to receive grant money and restricted donations for public art projects like the $175,000 “Rivers Edge” sculpture currently being created for installation in September at the Madison gateway coming off the Milton-Madison bridge.
- Courtney said the fund is needed to handle that money but that there could be other uses for the account in the future as additional public arts projects are pursued.
- Heard a report by Madison Police Chief Shawn Scudder that the police department is in the process of “rolling out” a community watch program in 12 neighborhoods in the city. The watch program would involve neighbors observing for potential problems in their areas, reporting those to a watch leader who would then report to the police.
- Scudder also reported briefly on proposed traffic changes that he brought to members of the Board of Public Works on Monday to calm traffic on East Main Street (Details were published in Tuesday’s edition) and said that an informational meeting for the public will be held later this summer prior to the launch of the changes.
- Urged local water customers to complete an online survey on lead water lines to determine which homes and businesses have lead water lines so that funding can be sought to correct that health issue. The survey can be found at: <https://www.cognitofirms.com/WTGIS1/MadisonUtilitiesWaterSurvey>.

“In the few short years we’ve been here we’ve seen so much positive change, it’s great to see and it reinforces our decision every day. The bridge approach, the pool, the riverfront, the music scene ... and we’ve absolutely seen a tourist uptick. Madison and Olde Tyme Marketplace are linked together now. We are part of each other’s story. And it’s only going to get better, I can feel it.”

SOAKING UP SUCCESS

Madison shoots sizzling 294 for 2nd-straight sectional title, 26th overall

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Madison took advantage of home course familiarity to card an impressive 294 performance en route to its second-straight IHSAA Boys Golf Sectional Championship on Monday at Sunrise Golf Course — the Cubs' 26th overall.

All four Madison scorers finished at 75 or better as the 20th-ranked Cubs shot a sizzling 294 that was just five stroke off the sectional record. Jennings County's runner-up 315 was pretty good, but still 21 strokes off Madison's torrid pace.

"I'm tickled to death. That's almost the same group as we had last year and just like last year, we got off to a little bit of a slow start to the season, but we picked it up at the end of the year," Madison coach Chris Conner said. "These guys did the exact same thing this year. They got hot at the end of the year and I hope it carries over

India's grand slam caps 6-run 9th as Reds beat Rockies

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Jonathan India hit his fourth career grand slam to cap a two-out, six-run rally in the ninth inning and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Colorado Rockies 12-7 on Wednesday to sweep the three-game series.

With the Reds trailing 7-6, Spencer Steer slugged a two-run homer off Jalen Beeks (2-3), who hit TJ Friedl with a pitch leading off the ninth.

"Felt good," Steer said. "I had a couple of at-bats earlier in the game where they were big RBI spots and I didn't come through. I was pretty pumped up."

Beeks was two strikes away from his seventh save when Steer took him deep.

After two singles and a walk loaded the bases, India blasted a pitch from Angel Chivilli for his second slam this season.

Friedl and Jeimer Candelario also went deep, Elly De La Cruz had three hits and Fernando Cruz (3-5) pitched an inning in relief for Cincinnati, which has won four straight.

The Reds scored 29 runs in the three-game series at Coors Field.

REDS 13, ROCKIES 3

Will Benson drove in three runs, Jeimer Candelario and Tyler Stephenson each hit a two-run home run, and the Cincinnati Reds blew past the Colorado Rockies 13-3 on Monday night.

The 13 runs were a season-high for the Reds, who have won seven of their past 10 games after starting the season 20-30.

Despite entering the matchup 29th among 30 MLB teams in batting average and hits, Cincinnati had its way with the Rockies' pitchers, racking up 18 hits, with each of the nine players in its starting lineup getting at least one hit. The 18 hits were tied for the most Colorado has allowed in a game this season.

Jonathan India and Spencer Steer finished three hits apiece for the Reds, though India's career-high six-game walk streak was snapped.

Candelario had two extra-base hits, with his seventh home run of the season and his team-leading 14th double.

Andrew Abbott (4-5) earned his third win in five starts, giving up three earned runs and striking out six across six innings.

REDS 4, ROCKIES 1

Frankie Montas took a no-hitter into the seventh inning, Elly De La Cruz hit a 448-foot homer and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Colorado Rockies 4-1 on Tuesday night.

Elias Diaz broke up Montas' no-hit bid with a double to center field to open the seventh, but Montas (3-4) retired the next three batters to conclude his outing and win for the first time since April 3.

Montas became the first visiting pitcher in the history of hitter-friendly Coors Field to throw at least seven innings with nine or more strikeouts while allowing no more than one hit, according to OptaSTATS.

Montas struck out nine, including Ezequiel Tovar and Ryan McMahon to end the first, while relying on a fastball that consistently reached 97 mph. He struck out six on heaters and threw 96 pitches, 63 for strikes. Fernando Cruz replaced him in the eighth.

Colts’ player rep opposed to 18-game NFL season

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts center Ryan Kelly made one thing perfectly clear Wednesday: He’s opposed to an 18-game season in any form.

The NFL’s Players Association executive committee wasted no time explaining his concerns following the second day of this week’s three-day minicamp at Colts headquarters. Kelly’s biggest concern is player safety.

“I think there’s a reason they’re already putting that out there in the media, right? Start talking about it, next thing you know people will think it’s going to happen,” the four-time Pro Bowler said. “I hope not. I think you start looking, 16 was a lot for a lot of guys and 17 is even more, right? It’s a lot too on your body, but this is a business and it’s about making money.”

Colts lose safety Scott to 2nd straight season-ending injury

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts safety Daniel Scott must wait another year to make his NFL debut.

Coach Shane Steichen said Tuesday the former California player will miss his second straight season with another injury suffered during the team’s offseason workouts.

Scott tore his Achilles tendon in practice last week, Steichen said. Last spring, Scott tore an anterior cruciate ligament in his knee and never made it onto the field.

He was a first-team all-PAC-12 selection in 2021 and a third team all-conference choice in 2022 before Indy selected him in the fifth round of the 2023 draft, No. 158 overall. His absence will leave the Colts even thinner on a depth chart short on proven starters.

Steichen said Scott tore an Achilles tendon.

Kelly also noted that there has been discussion about changing the way off-season workouts are conducted in the future. One potential change would be allowing players to start ramping up in-town workouts in early July as they prepare for training camp, rather than going back and forth between their homes and the team complex.

“We throw, we do all these things and then we don’t see each for two months,” Kelly said, referring to the current schedule. “So it’s like, is that best and most effective way to train and to really get the most out of it? I think the counter argument is that you add a month in the beginning of the season, it makes the season feel even longer when the league’s pushing for 18 (games) and we’re already playing 17. So I think there’s going to be some back and forth and I don’t think there’s going to be a perfect solution.”

Clark, physical play, fouls dominate discussions around WNBA

BY DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Caitlin Clark has been tested during her first month in the WNBA with physical play from opponents that has brought an increased spotlight on the league.

Not all of the attention has been positive.

The conversations exploded over the weekend when Chicago’s Chennedy Carter gave a shoulder shot to Clark that knocked her to the floor before an inbound pass during the third quarter of the Sky-Indiana Fever game on Saturday.

“I think everybody is physical with me, they get away with things that probably other people don’t get away with,” Clark, who like many good offensive players sometimes flails when hit to draw the attention of officials, said after a loss to the Los Angeles Sparks last week. “It’s tough, but that’s just the fact of the matter.

“This is a very physical game, and you’re going to get pressure, this is professional basketball,” Clark said. “It is what it is, honestly.”

The officials said Carter’s action was an away-from-the-ball foul and didn’t review the play. It was deemed a common foul at the time. The league upgraded the play to a flagrant-1 violation foul a day later.

Though the WNBA hasn’t commented on the physical plays involving Clark, the Carter=Clark collision had people talking across not only the sports media landscape, but also shows like “The View.”

There’s no shortage of opinions on the physicality that the No. 1 pick has faced this season, either arguing that not enough is being done to protect her, that she is being targeted by other players because of the media attention she receives, that race is a factor or that it is just the natural competitive evolution in the growing sport of women’s basketball.

Going into Tuesday’s games, Clark is currently 11th in average fouls drawn per contest, averaging 4.2 per contest, tops among rookies in that category. She is third overall in total fouls drawn with 46, but the Fever (2-9) have played the most games.

Clark has said she won’t let the physical play get into her head and that she will continue to play her game. At times, however, her frustration has shown when she feels she doesn’t get a call. She has been hit with a league-leading three technical fouls. A seventh technical during the regular season would result in a one-game suspension.

Fever coach Christie Sides understands Clark’s frustrations and isn’t taking the “it is what it is” approach. Sides believes some of the fouls against Clark have crossed the line and said she will continue to send video clips to the league until something is done about it.

The Carter foul happened in Clark’s first pro matchup with college rival Angel Reese, a 71-70 Indiana win. That game was watched by an average of 1.53 million viewers with a peak of over 2.19 million.

Reese has had her own “welcome to the WNBA moments.” Most notably, when she was thrown to the ground on a hard foul by Connecticut’s Alyssa Thomas in a Sky-Sun game last month.

The officials immediately went to the monitor to review the situation and upgraded the foul to a flagrant-2 on Thomas, which comes with an automatic ejection.

“It’s not just cause I’m a rookie,” Reese said of the physical play that comes her way. “I’m a player. I’m a basketball player. They don’t give a damn if I’m a rookie. I mean, I want them to come at me every day, I want them to come at everybody. I mean, they’re not supposed to be nice to me. I hope you all know that.

“They’re not supposed to be nice to me or lay down because I’m Angel Reese or cause I’m a rookie.”

AP WNBA POLL

Connecticut remains a unanimous No. 1 choice in this week’s

AP WNBA poll. The Sun are the only undefeated team left in the league. Minnesota edged Las Vegas for the second spot. New York was fourth with Seattle fifth. Atlanta and Dallas were next, followed by Phoenix and Chicago. Los Angeles, Indiana and Washington rounded out the rankings.

CAITLIN CORNER

Clark finished off a brutal early schedule where the Fever played 11 games in 20 days with the worst shooting performance of her young professional career. Clark went 1-for-10 against New York in a 36-point blowout loss Sunday night and finished with three points. Still she’s averaging, 15.6 points, 6.4 assists and 5.1 rebounds. Clark earned Rookie of the Month honors from the league earlier this week.

ROOKIE WATCH

Minnesota rookie Alissa Pili had a breakout game last week against Phoenix, scoring 20 points and connecting on seven of her nine shots from the field. Pili was 4-for-4 from behind the 3-point line in the blowout win. Reese continues to put up impressive rebounding numbers in her young career. She’s leading the league averaging five offensive rebounds a game which would be second all-time in WNBA history behind Yolanda Griffith’s 5.1 in 2001.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Jewell Loyd of Seattle earned AP Player of the Week honors. The Seattle Storm guard averaged 20.5 points, 6.0 assists and 2.5 rebounds to help the team win both its games. Other players receiving votes included DeWanna Bonner and Alyssa Thomas of Connecticut, Jonquel Jones of New York, Napheesa Collier of Minnesota, Tina Charles of Atlanta and Aja Wilson of Las Vegas.

Jones, previous oldest living Indy 500 winner, dies

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORRANCE, Calif. — Parnelli Jones, the 1963 Indianapolis 500 winner, died Tuesday at Torrance Memorial Medical Center after a battle with Parkinson’s disease, his son said. Jones was 90.

At the time of his death, Jones was the oldest living winner of “The Greatest Spectacle in Racing.”

Rufus Parnell Jones was born in Texarkana, Arkansas, in 1933 but moved to Torrance as a young child and never left. It was there that he became “Parnelli” because his given name of Rufus was too well known for him to compete without locals knowing his true identity and that he wasn’t old enough to race.

A friend came up with “Parnellie,” which was painted on the door of Jones’s 1934 Ford jalopy. The final “e” was eventually dropped, the name remained.

Jones in 1962 became the first driver in at Indianapolis Motor Speedway to qualify at over 150 mph with a four-lap average of 150.370. He was the Indy 500 pole-sitter in 1962 and 1963 and co-rookie of the year with Bobby Marshman in 1961.

He made seven starts at Indianapolis from 1961 through 1967 and led in five of those races for a total of 492 laps — which is the eighth-highest laps led total in the race’s history. In the only two starts he didn’t lead in 1965 and 1966, Jones ran mostly in second place. He finished second in 1965 and retired from there with mechanical trouble in 1966.

Considered one of the most versatile drivers of his time, Jones moved to other vehicles and won the Baja 1000 twice and a Trans-Am championship. He also had four Cup Series victories in NASCAR as well as wins in USAC sprint cars and midgets.

Jones is survived by his wife of nearly 57 years, Judy, sons PJ and Page and six grandchildren. Both of Jones’ sons had professional racing careers. PJ Jones followed in his father’s footsteps by starting the Indianapolis 500 in 2004 and 2006. Page Jones was making great strides on Midwest short tracks until he suffered serious injuries in a crash in 1994, ending his driving career.

Parnelli Jones was inducted into numerous Halls of Fame, including the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hall of Fame, the National Motorsports Hall of Fame and both the National Sprint Car and National Midget Halls of Fame.

Lucas Oil turns into Olympic-sized swim venue from NFL stadium

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Lucas Oil Stadium is ready to make a splash in its swimming debut.

On Wednesday, organizers and sponsors showed off the transformation of the NFL’s Indianapolis Colts’ home stadium into the world’s largest swimming venue with two 1 million-gallon pools for next week’s U.S. Olympic Trials.

It’s the first time a major swimming competition will be held in an American football stadium, and the plan is to set an attendance record for an indoor meet on opening night, June 15. The full capacity is listed at 30,000.

“What you’re going to see if you get to walk around and go behind that curtain is the largest warmup pool ever built for any competition anywhere in the world, 10 50-meter lanes and seven 25-meter lanes,” USA Swimming president and CEO Tim Hinchey III said. “This seating across from me is dedicated solely for our coaches and our athletes. This will be the first time at any of our Olympic Trials where our coaches and athletes will get a front-row seat to watch their teammates swimming and competing to make the Olympic Team.”

The nine-night event gives Indy officials a prime-time slot on national television to showcase the city’s features. But they also expect more immediate benefits with 250,000 visitors in town — prompting Mayor Joe Hogsett to project more than $100 million in revenue being added to the local community.

What will they see? A lighted 66-foot replica of the Eiffel Tower, symbolizing the journey 52 Olympians will make to the Paris Olympics, a huge video board and potentially national and world records in the gigantic pool.

And they’ll see just how much has changed since Indy also hosted the Olympic Trials the last time Paris last hosted the Olympics, in 1924.

“They will get to fly to Paris and not have to take a week-long boat ride,” said Patrik Johnson, president of Lilly USA, a corporate sponsor whose headquarters are a short walk away from the retractable roof stadium.

The roof is scheduled to be closed all week.

But the impact of the Olympic Trials will linger long after the governing body and athletes leave town.

Local and national officials have pledged to fund programs for water safety education and teaching 50,000 people how to swim. And all of that water now inside Lucas Oil Stadium, will be safely pumped back into the White River.

But for some of the world’s biggest swimming stars — Katie Ledecky and Caleb Dressel, Simone Manuel and Ryan Murphy — this is a rare opportunity to join the list of athletes such as Peyton and Eli Manning and Tom Brady who have competed in a venue that hosted a Super Bowl, multiple Final Fours, the college football national championship game, NBA All-Star festivities and now, an Olympic Trials.

“The emerald-green turf is now diamond-blue water, and if you’ve been here before, it looks a little different,” Lucas Oil Stadium director Eric Neuburger said. “One of the magical things about Lucas Oil Stadium is the way it can be transformed to the host the world’s most important, coolest and biggest events no matter what field of play is called for.”

NBA FINALS NOTEBOOK

Porzingis a go, Kyrie and LeBron make nice, Hardaway Jr. throws shade at dad

BY JIMMY GOLEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Celtics 7-footer Kristaps Porzingis said he would be ready to “just go out there and hoop” for Game 1 of the NBA Finals on Thursday night after missing Boston’s last 10 games with a strained left calf.

“It was a long road to get to this point for me. But feeling good,” he said at media day on Wednesday. “(It) burns inside of me, not being able to be out there. But tomorrow finally I’ll get the chance and I’m excited.”

Porzingis said he couldn’t predict how it will be once he gets into a game for the first time since April 29.

“I did as much as I could to prepare for this moment, but there’s nothing like game minutes and game experience that I’m going to get tomorrow,” he said. “It will be tough to jump into the finals like this.”

An offseason acquisition that helped solidify the Celtics frontcourt, Porzingis averaged 20 points, 7.2 rebounds and almost two blocks per game. But he was again dogged by injuries that limited him to 57 games.

He left Game 4 of the first-round series against the Miami Heat and missed all of the next two rounds, when Boston eliminated Cleveland in five games and swept the Indiana Pacers in the Eastern Conference finals.

“Guys so far have been playing great, taking care of business, guys stepping up,” he said, singling out Al Horford’s work at center in his absence. “I just look forward to add more to complete the mission.”

KYRIE AND LEBRON

LeBron James praised former teammate Kyrie Irving on a podcast, calling him “the most gifted player the NBA has ever seen.”

The feeling is mutual.

“There’s a lot of gratitude there, as well,” Irving said on Wednesday when asked if he had heard James’ comments. “I think we both have been able to mature and really appreciate what we got a chance to accomplish.”

James said on his podcast “Mind the Game” that he’s happy and proud to watch Irving in the finals, but at the same time he’s “mad that I’m not his running mate anymore.”

“There was nothing on a basketball floor that Kyrie couldn’t do,” he said.

Irving and James reached the finals three straight seasons with the Cavaliers, winning it all in 2016 and losing to the Warriors the following year. Then Irving requested a trade, and the relationship soured.

“I think there were some things that got in the way of our relationship when I was a little bit younger,” Irving said at NBA Finals media day on Wednesday. “Now that I’m able to vocalize how I feel as a man, be comfortable in it, stand on my square, my beliefs, where I’m coming from, I feel like our relationship’s different because of that now.”

“(I) definitely miss him,” Irving said. “Just a mutual respect there for what we brought to the table. His leadership, my leadership style, I think it meshed very well. I was learning a lot from him that I’m appreciative for the rest of my life.”

Irving wound up in Boston, where he also had a still-festering fallout. In previous trips back to the Garden, he has been received rudely and a similar welcome is expected for Game 1 on Thursday night.

TRASH-TALKING TIM

Tim Hardaway Jr. couldn’t resist the chance to talk trash about his father.

Asked on Wednesday what it meant for him to be playing in the NBA Finals for the first time, Hardaway said, “It means a lot. Especially being the first of my family to do so.” Reporters chuckled and gasped.

Hardaway’s father was a five-time All-Star in 13 NBA seasons and was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in 2022. He finished in the top 10 of the NBA MVP voting three times, and also won a gold medal at the 2000 Olympics.

But he only made it as far as the conference finals once, losing with the Miami Heat to Michael Jordan’s Bulls in 1997.

Hardaway Jr. has never averaged 20 points in a season, like his father did five times, and his award votes have come mostly as a sixth man. But he said he had the advantage of his father’s experience.

“I wouldn’t get to this point without my dad,” he said. “He’s always by my side. He’s always a phone call away. He’s always supporting me, always coming to the games. He’s a phone call away when I’m struggling, when I’m not, even if I’m having great games in a stretch, he’s telling me to keep my head down, don’t stop, keep that energy, keep that flow going. And, he’s always reiterating to me: always have fun. He’s been telling me that since high school, and that’s what I’ve been trying to do my whole entire career.”

“The guy has lived it and done it. So, you know, that’s that’s that’s the luxury I do have of having a father that played in this league.”

NYC man charged in betting scandal

BY JENNIFER PELTZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A New York man was charged Tuesday in a sports betting scandal that spurred the NBA to ban Jontay Porter for life, with the charges marking the first known criminal fallout from the matter.

Porter is not named in the court complaint, but its specifics about “Player 1” match the details of the former Toronto Raptors player’s downfall this spring. Brooklyn federal prosecutors declined to comment on whether Porter is under investigation.

But Brooklyn U.S. Attorney Breon Peace said the alleged co-conspirators and “Player 1” participated “in a brazen, illegal betting scheme that had a corrupting influence on two games and numerous bets.”

“Whether on the court or in the casino, every point matters,” Peace said in a statement.

The complaint says the player communicated directly with defendant Long Phi Pham and alleged co-defendants whose names are redacted.

After the NBA and others began investigating this spring, the player warned Pham and others via an encrypted messaging app April 4 that they “might just get hit w a rico” — an apparent reference to the common acronym for a federal racketeering charge — and asked whether they had deleted “all the stuff” from their phones, according to the complaint.

Current contact information for Porter could not immediately be found.

According to the complaint, the player owed “significant gambling debts” to at least one of the alleged conspirators and was encouraged to settle them by doing a “special” — strategically bowing out of games so that wagers could pay off for those in the know, who could bet on him underperforming expectations.

“If I don’t do a special with your terms. Then it’s up. And u hate me and if I don’t get u 8k by Friday you’re coming to Toronto to beat me up,” the player said in an encrypted message early this year, according to the complaint.

It says the player went on to tell Pham and another defendant that he planned to take himself out of a Jan. 26 game early, claiming injury. He had reported hurting an eye in another game four days earlier but was not on the injured list.

Porter played 4 minutes and 24 seconds against the Los Angeles Clippers in that game before saying he had aggravated the eye problem, exiting with no points, 3 rebounds and 1 assist — well below what sportsbooks were expecting, creating a payday for anyone who bet the “under.” One alleged conspirator netted $33,250, and another’s relative garnered $75,000, according to the complaint.

Embracing the New Era of Extended Retirement

Layin’ it on the line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

The concept of retirement, once a brief respite before life’s end, is undergoing a significant transformation. With advancements in healthcare and changes in societal structure, the retirement phase could now span nearly as much of one’s life as one’s working years. This evolution prompts a reevaluation of retirement planning, urging individuals to adapt to the changing landscape.

Historically, retirement as we know it was nonexistent. Ancient societies saw individuals working until their physical capabilities waned, with family and community providing support in their later years. The Industrial Revolution marked a pivotal shift, introducing pension schemes to support aging workers who could no longer meet the demands of labor-intensive jobs. This era laid the groundwork for the modern concept of retirement, further cemented by the introduction of Social Security systems in the 20th century, transitioning the responsibility of caring for older adults from families and communities to the government.

The Need for Flexibility in Retirement Planning:

However, the sustainability of this model is under scrutiny. The aging baby boomer generation, declining birth rates, and a shrinking labor force pose significant challenges to Social Security and Medicare systems. These programs, reliant on the taxation of the current workforce, face potential shortfalls as the ratio of workers to retirees diminishes.

The rapid pace of change over the past two and a half centuries highlights the need for flexibility in retirement planning. The future of retirement is uncertain, with potential shifts in government support mechanisms and the impact of technological and healthcare advancements extending life expectancies. Individuals must reconsider their approach to retirement, considering the possibility of living much longer post-retirement than previous generations.

Transition from Pensions to Defined Contribution Plans:

Pensions, once a staple of retirement planning, are becoming increasingly rare outside government employment, replaced by defined contribution plans like 401(k)s. This shift emphasizes the growing importance of personal responsibility in retirement planning, harking back to pre-industrial times when individuals were primarily responsible for their own well-being in old age.

The increasing life expectancy poses another challenge. With people living longer, the financial resources required to sustain a comfortable lifestyle in retirement must also stretch further. This reality necessitates a more dynamic approach to retirement planning, considering not just monetary savings, but also continued contribution to society, risk management, and strategic delegation of planning responsibilities.

Redefining Retirement:

Redefining retirement involves considering continued contributions beyond traditional working years, including embarking on a second career, starting a business, or engaging in meaningful volunteer work. This not only provides financial benefits but also allows individuals to continue applying their skills and knowledge, enriching both their lives and society.

Risk management is another critical aspect of modern retirement planning. With longer lifespans, the potential for financial strain increases, making it essential to consider investment risks, healthcare costs, and tax implications. Strategies such as diversifying income streams, investing in insurance products like annuities, and transitioning to tax-advantaged assets can help mitigate these risks.

Lastly, successful retirement planning is increasingly a collaborative effort. Leveraging the expertise of financial advisors, attorneys, insurance agents, and CPAs can provide a comprehensive approach to retirement planning, ensuring that all aspects are carefully considered and aligned with one’s long-term goals.

As retirement continues to evolve, individuals must adapt their planning strategies to navigate the complexities of a longer, potentially more fulfilling post-work phase of life. This requires a proactive and flexible approach, taking into account the myriad factors that influence retirement in the modern era.

The landscape of retirement is changing. Embrace this extended retirement era with a plan that’s as resilient as it is rewarding. Connect with a trusted advisor now to tailor a strategy that fits your future. Let’s redefine retirement together.

Vols — nation’s dominant program since COVID — seeking title

BY TERESA M. WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

No. 1 national seed Tennessee has established itself as the dominant post-pandemic baseball program. All that’s missing is a national title. The Volunteers’ 204 victories and 540 home runs since the start of the 2021 season are the most of any Division I program. They’ve won two SEC regular-season titles and two conference tournament championships. Their nation-leading and program-record 159 homers this season are the most since the 1997 LSU “Gorilla Ball” team hit a record 188. Now the Vols are trying to slug their way to two more victories to reach a third College World Series in four years and second straight. The Vols will host Evansville (38-24), who knocked off No. 16 East Carolina for its first regional championship, in the best-of-three Knoxville Super Regional starting Friday. Coach Tony Vitello, hired by Tennessee in June 2017, has the Vols rolling going 12-0 winning four straight regionals. “I think the last three years have been a com-pound effect of some lessons learned and some things gained by other people that came before these guys,” Vitello said. The Vols still will have to deal with the nation’s top seed not winning the national title since 1999 when the CWS began its current format. For now, they’re focused on trying to be among the eight teams advancing to the CWS starting June 14 in Omaha, Nebraska. Centerfielder Hunter Ensley, who played in Omaha last June, said the Vols put together three pretty complete offensive games in the regional. The message after advancing was enjoy briefly as just another step. “There’s a lot to do for the rest of the week to get better for this weekend regardless of who we play,” Ensley said. Evansville leftfielder Mark Shallenberger said the key to pulling off big upsets is focusing one pitch and hit at a time. That’s what helped the Aces make program history. “Pressure’s off of us,” Shallenberger said before double-checking to make sure Evansville’s next stop is Knoxville. “We’re playing baseball. We’re enjoying this awesome atmosphere. ... This ship ain’t sunk yet.” Evansville will have to do something that few opponents have managed against the Vols, who’ve shown off their power all season. They’ve homered in 57 of 64 games this season, including 12 while winning three games in the regional. Worse for opponents is trying to figure out who to avoid with Tennessee’s power is spread throughout the lineup. All-SEC second baseman Christian Moore has a team-high 29, and he’s just one of 15 different Vols with at least one home run. Six have at least 11 home runs. Nine different Vols have had a grand slam with Tennessee tying 1996 Oklahoma (66 games) with 12 grand slams. Only 2003 Arizona State (14 in 68 games) has had more. Vitello knows he has a large group of infielders led by 6-foot-3 first baseman Blake Burke and a pair of 6-foot-1 players in Moore and third baseman Billy Amick, who transferred from Clemson last summer. He also sees teammates who take pride and trust each other to come through with big hits, almost coaching each other. “You never know who it’s going to be that day, but I think everyone is involved and contributing, which makes it fun,” Vitello said. Even when Moore, Burke and Amick — Tennessee’s three leadoff hitters — combined to go 1-for-13 in the regional clincher over Southern Miss, four different Vols combined to hit five home runs. Cal Stark had two. Christian Ostrander saw Tennessee last year as Southern Miss’ pitching coach before being promoted last offseason. He sees Vitello having a more experienced and mature roster than a year ago when the Vols went into Hattiesburg and beat Southern Miss to clinch the program’s sixth CWS berth all-time. Combined with Tennessee’s lengthy lineup, Ostrander said the Vols just are a handful no matter who they face next. “You can’t catch your breath, you have to execute, and if you give them a little bit of something they can hurt you because they can do so many things,” Ostrander said. “It’s just a very, very, very good lineup and a very good program, very good team.”

Coming up Aces: Evansville advances to face No.1 Vols

BY ERIC OLSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those pesky Purple Aces of Evansville earned their first NCAA regional title Monday, and their reward is a weekend trip to No. 1 national seed Tennessee for the next round. They weren’t concerned about what’s next. They were too busy celebrating the biggest win in the program’s 100-year history. Evansville became the ninth No. 4 regional seed since 1999 to reach a super regional when it bounced back from a 13-run loss to East Carolina on Sunday to beat the No. 16 Pirates 6-5 on their home field in Greenville, North Carolina. Also locking up regionals on Monday were North Carolina, UConn, Florida and Oregon State. The best-of-three super regionals open Friday and Saturday. The NCAA will announce the schedule and hosts on Tuesday, though the higher seeded team typically plays on its home field. The eight winners advance to the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska, beginning June 14. The matchups, with national seeds: Evansville (38-24) vs. No. 1 Tennessee (53-11); UConn (35-24) vs. No. 8 Florida State (45-15); Kansas State (35-24) vs. No. 12 Virginia (44-15); West Virginia (36-22) vs. No. 4 North Carolina (45-14); No. 15 Oregon State (45-14) vs. No. 2 Kentucky (43-14); No. 10 North Carolina State (36-20) vs. No. 7 Georgia (42-15); Florida (32-28) vs. No. 6 Clemson (44-14); Oregon (40-18) vs. No. 3 Texas A&M (47-13). Mark Shallenberger’s three-run homer in the sixth inning gave Evansville the lead against East Carolina, and relievers Max Hansmann and Shane Harris combined to hold the Pirates to one hit and one walk the rest of the way. Coach Wes Carroll said the program’s milestone victory was achieved through recent facilities upgrades, recruiting and strong administrative support. It was especially emotional for Carroll, who grew up 15 minutes from campus, played for the Aces from 1998-2001 and became head coach in 2009. “John Stanley hired me, taking a chance on a 28-year-old who just bled purple and believed in this place,” Carroll said, referring to the former athletic director. “Sixteen years in, it’s been a journey, one that has been so joyful just because of the people I’ve been able to be around and work with. Over the past five or six years I really struck gold with people who cared about me and cared about our baseball program and we started to build something. We got people to believe in a vision.” North Carolina knocked out defending national champion LSU with a 4-3 win in 10 innings. The Tar Heels’ Colby Wilkerson singled in the tying run in the ninth, and Alex Madera’s two-out base hit brought in the go-ahead run in the 10th after right fielder Jake Brown mis-played a fly ball to keep the inning alive. Dalton Pence pitched a perfect bottom half against the top of the LSU order to send the Tar Heels to their second super regional in three years. UConn left-hander Gabe Van Emon, a graduate transfer from Division III Endicott College in Massachusetts, limited Oklahoma to five singles and two walks over 7 1/3 shutout innings in a 7-1 victory on the Sooners’ home field. The Big East regular-season champion Huskies will be in their second super regional in three years. Van Emon has been used as a weekend and midweek starter and middle reliever this season. On the biggest stage of his career he turned in his longest outing since pitching a shutout for Endicott against Wentworth Institute of Technology on April 29, 2023. Florida beat No. 11 Oklahoma State 4-2 for its second win over the Cowboys in two days. The Gators continued their improbable late-season run while Oklahoma State failed for a third straight year to advance as a regional host. The Gators needed a winning record to be eligible for an NCAA at-large bid, and they secured that requirement by winning at Georgia on the last day of the regular season. They went one-and-out at the SEC Tournament and went to Stillwater, Oklahoma, as the No. 3 regional seed. The Gators won three straight after losing 7-1 to the Cowboys on Saturday, and now the 2023 national runners-up are in supers for the second straight year.

“The vibes just kind of switched,” Florida two-way star Jac Caglianone said. “Everybody was amped up and enjoying themselves and playing baseball. We got away from that for a little bit. We found that spark once again and it showed today.” Oregon State beat UC Irvine 11-6 in a game that resumed Monday after it was suspended because of rain in the fourth inning Sunday night. Elijah Hainline homered and drove in three runs for the Beavers, who advanced for the second time in three years.

Oilers seek to become 6th NHL team since 2000 to win Cup

BY JOSH DUBOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Firing a coach during the season is typically seen as a sign that a season has gone off the rails.

Based on recent history in the NHL, it also can be seen as a sign that a talented team might be ready for a turnaround.

The Edmonton Oilers are the latest team on that list, having made it to the Stanley Cup Final less than seven months after firing coach Jay Woodcroft 13 games into the season.

Kris Knoblauch took over a team that was 31st in the standings and helped them win the Western Conference as he tries to become the sixth NHL coach since 2000 to win it all after being hired during the season. That happened just twice in the NHL in the 20th century with Toronto's Dick Irwin (1932) and Montreal's Al MacNeil (1971) doing it.

Teams in the NHL have been far more willing to fire coaches than in most other major sports leagues with only five of the 32 teams having coaches who have been on the job more than two seasons.

If Knoblauch can finish the job and lead the Oilers to the title, the six times that has happened in the NHL since 2000 would equal the total times that has happened in the NFL (0), NBA (4) and Major League Baseball (2) combined in their long histories.

The NBA coaches to do it are Jack McKinney in 1980 for the Lakers, Pat Riley two years later for Los Angeles and again in 2006 with Miami, and Tyronn Lue in 2016 with Cleveland. The two managers to win a World Series after being hired during the season are Jack McKeon with the Florida Marlins in 2003 and Bob Lemon with the Yankees in 1978.

The five coaches who have led their teams to Stanley Cup titles since 2000 after taking over during a season:

Craig Berube, 2019 St. Louis Blues
Mike Yeo was fired 19 games into the 2018-19 season and replaced by Berube. St. Louis dropped to last in the standings in early January before putting together an impressive run.

The Blues finished second in the Central Division and rallied from a 3-2 series deficit in the second round to beat Dallas in double overtime in Game 7. They then overcame a 2-1 series deficit in the conference final to beat San Jose in six games to make their first Stanley Cup Final since 1970.

There, Berube led St. Louis to a seven-game series win over Boston for the franchise's first championship.

Mike Sullivan, 2016 Pittsburgh Penguins

The Penguins were sputtering early in the 2015-16 season and looked poised to waste another year of Sidney Crosby's prime when they fired Mike Johnston and promoted Sullivan from the AHL.

Fueled by some key midseason additions and brilliant play from Crosby, Pittsburgh surged into the playoffs and didn't slow down from there. The Penguins lost three games combined in the first two rounds and then rallied from 3-2 down in the conference final to beat Tampa Bay.

They overwhelmed San Jose in a six-game series and hoisted the Stanley Cup for the second time in Crosby's career.

Darryl Sutter, 2012 Los Angeles Kings

The Kings were mired in 11th place in the West in December and struggling to score when they fired Terry Murray and eventually brought Sutter off his farm in Alberta for his first coaching job in more than five years.

Scheffler trying to move past arrest even after charges dropped

BY DOUG FERGUSON
AP GOLF WRITER

DUBLIN, Ohio — Masters champion Scottie Scheffler said he knew five days in advance that charges related to his arrest during the PGA Championship were going to be dismissed. In his mind, that wasn't the end of the saga but rather the beginning of trying to put it behind him.

Criminal charges were dismissed on May 29, nearly two weeks after images emerged of the world's No. 1 golfer being arrested and handcuffed outside Valhalla Golf Club in Louisville, Kentucky.

Scheffler said his attorney told him on May 24 that dropping the charges had become a formality because "we had a lot of evidence on our side." But that didn't mean he had moved past it.

"The charges are dropped, but I still ... now it's almost more appropriate for people to ask me about it," Scheffler said Tuesday ahead of the Memorial. "And to be honest with you, it's not something that I love reliving, just because it was fairly traumatic for me being arrested going into the golf course."

"It was definitely a bit of a relief, but not total relief because that's something that will always kind of stick with me," he said. "That mug shot, I'm sure is not going anywhere anytime soon."

Even with the U.S. Open approaching, images are still hard to forget of Scheffler in gym shorts and a T-shirt being led to a police car in handcuffs.

The case stemmed from a fatal accident involving a pedestrian, John Mills. Scheffler was charged with a felony for assaulting a police officer with his vehicle, along with three misdemeanors, after police alleged he did not follow instructions.

The arresting officer said he was dragged by Scheffler's car and suffered minor injuries.

A surveillance video released by Louisville police last week showed Detective Bryan Gillis pursuing Scheffler's vehicle on foot and stopping him from entering the course. Scheffler is later pulled from the car and handcuffed. But the video did not show Gillis' first contact with Scheffler, authorities said.

Scheffler's mug shot from jail made its way onto shirts during the final three days of the PGA Championship. He was released in time to make his tee time for the second round and shot 66 to get into contention. He finished the week tied for eighth.

MLB strengthening U.K. ties with London Series

BY KEN MAGUIRE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Summer-time in Paris with reservations not far from the Eiffel Tower. Sounds dreamy.

Major League Baseball's plans to play a series in the French capital fell through, though.

You know what city doesn't disappoint when it comes to American sports? London.

The New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies play a two-game set this weekend at London Stadium for the league's third visit in the past five years — ahead of another date in 2026.

It's a marriage that has worked. The city boasts of a big economic impact, and MLB gains more international exposure.

“We've clearly identified the U.K. as a priority market and an area that we plan to emphasize for international growth of Major League Baseball,” Chris Marinak, the league's chief operations and strategy officer, told The Associated Press in an interview.

Paris was in line to host in 2025 but the league pulled the plug in November, unable to land a promoter. The status of the government-owned Stade de France was also a factor as the facility — which will host athletics events during the Paris Olympics — was put up for sale last year. Stadium officials also cited a scheduling conflict.

Just like this season's opening series in South Korea, the recent Mexico City games, and the upcoming London ones, Paris was identified as a destination in the March 2022 labor deal between MLB and the players' association.

The New York Yankees were said to be interested in playing in the French capital — but the games were never officially announced. Marinak confirmed there's no current plan to move that series to another international city.

“That particular one, I would say, really just had never left the conceptual stage to the point where it was scheduled or officially calendared,” he said.

Taking it to the next level involves “planning, putting the event together, venues, promoters, et cetera,” he said.

“We would have had to make a lot of leaps forward from where we started. We ultimately just felt like there were just too many moving parts at the time to make it happen,” Marinak said. “We're not ruling it out as a future option. I don't think we've gotten to the point yet where we've really sketched out specifics on what the next conceptual locations for a game could be.”

The consortium that runs the 80,000-capacity Stade de France, located just north of the city in Saint-Denis, is in charge until next August. The government is taking bids for a new long-term contract.

“It would have been impossible to actually stage the MLB games during the weekend that they had in mind,” Stade de France director of development and strategy Florent Coulon said, citing the French Cup final in late May and soccer national team commitments afterward.

Gaétan Alibert, a baseball author and podcaster in France, said he's confident Paris will eventually get a series once the stadium management question is settled. Interest is growing, he said, noting L'Equipe magazine dedicated a cover to a baseball player — featuring Shohei Ohtani in April — for the first time in its history.

The Parc des Princes is located near Roland Garros but is smaller, with a capacity around 48,000.

The Paris experience hasn't dampened MLB's hopes for Europe, Marinak said, though a year ago London was described as “the jumping off point “ for Europe.

“At this point there's no new location or venue or anything that has crossed past the stages of conceptual conversation,” Marinak said.

London Stadium, where Usain Bolt won gold at the 2012 London Olympics, is big enough to configure into a baseball field. The NFL's international plan is in overdrive — made easier by being able to pop into soccer stadiums around the world. Even cricket venues tend to be too small for baseball.

Local support is vital. The London city government initially provided a grant of 300,000 pounds ($380,000) in 2017 to lure MLB — the Yankees and Boston Red Sox in 2019 played the league's debut game in Europe — plus commitments around security, transportation and promotion. The city has also contributed financially to MLB's “legacy program.”

Last year's series — the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs split a two-game set — created a $67 million boost for London's economy, in an estimate based on responses of 6,200 fans at the games.

Attendance averaged 55,000 with an estimated 71% coming from the U.K.

The league said #LondonSeries trended globally on X on both game days, that its U.K. social media channels have achieved 133% growth in the past year, and that MLB merchandise sales in Britain are up 43% over last year. MLB's “growing partnership” with the BBC resulted in distributing the first World Series game on BBC digital platforms last year, the league said. That's after the BBC signed a deal in late 2022 to begin showing some games, including the London series, each season.

The league has tapped Wrexham co-owner and Phillies fan Rob McElhenney to help promote the weekend series.

English fans have grown accustomed to the American-style gameday experience — the NFL has been staging games in London since 2007. Mayor Sadiq Khan says he wants to bring the Super Bowl to London — an idea that NFL commissioner Roger Goodell all but shot down in 2023.

London also hosted an annual NBA game for nearly a decade before it moved to Paris.

But the MLB pushing deeper into Europe — especially with language barriers — will be a harder sell, said Boris Helleu, a senior lecturer in sports marketing at the University of Caen Normandy.

“For Europeans, for instance, the rules are quite difficult,” said Helleu, who is a baseball fan. “(American football and basketball) are easier to understand and maybe more spectacular.”

Despite the Paris setback, MLB's international schedule has been busy. This weekend's games will complete a slate of six regular-season games played outside the U.S. and Canada this season. There were four last year and eight in 2019.

“We're really pleased with the trajectory that we're on in the U.K.,” Marinak said.

to Thursday.”

All four Madison scorers finished in the top five individually, led by junior Henry Ashley with an even-par 72. Classmate Landon True was only one stroke back with a 73 and senior Clayton Benkert, last year’s sectional champion, was another stroke back at 74. Luke Barron finished with a season-best 75 to place fifth overall while Jayce Sharp had a non-scoring 88.

As strong as the Madison quartet was, none came close to individual champion Landon Smith, of Austin, who carded a five-under 67 that was one stroke shy of the tourney record.

“Landon Smith plays over here all of the time. He works just as hard as our guys do,” Conner said. “He’s a good kid. I’m happy for him too.”

While Madison advanced to the regional on Thursday, no other local golfer made the cut, although a couple came close.

Southwestern’s Braxton Lewis, who has spent most of his spring playing for the Rebels’ sectional-champion baseball team and hasn’t played much golf, shot an 83 that was just four strokes out of a regional berth. Switzerland County’s Evan Bosaw matched Lewis with an 83 to just miss advancing.

Southwestern’s team shot a season-best 350, but that was good for only sixth in a stronger-than-usual field. Wyatt Barker had an 87 for the Rebels, Jackson Taylor shot an 89, Wayde Barker an 81 and Blake Boley a 93.

Switzerland County was ninth as a team with a 355. After Bosaw, Ethan Weaver had an 87, Ben Bovard-Roberts had an 88, Jacob Williams a 97 and Ezra Daydharum a 98.

Shawe’s Orin Elkins, the Hilltoppers’ only participant, shot a 123.

Jennings County placed second as a team with a 315 while Scottsburg was third with a 330. Both teams joined Madison in the IHSAA Regional at Champions Pointe near Henryville on Thursday.

Along with Austin’s Landon Smith, Lawrenceburg’s Cameron Williamson, with a 75, and Rising Sun’s Nate Elliott, with a 79, earned regional berths as individuals.

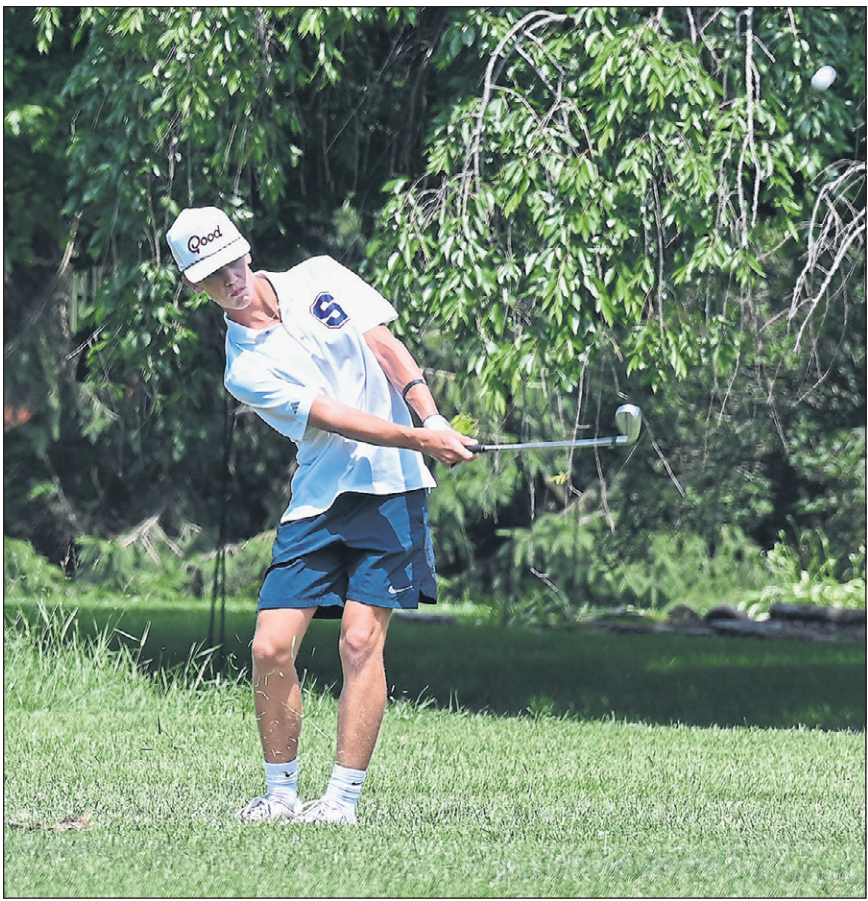

Team scores were: Madison, 294; Jennings County, 315; Scottsburg, 330; Charlestown, 332; Lawrenceburg, 341; Southwestern, 350; Rising Sun, 350; Austin, 351; Switzerland County, 355; Henryville, 419; and South Dearborn 423.

Madison moved on to face a tough regional field at Champions Pointe — arguably the toughest regional in the state — with traditional powers Center Grove, Franklin, Roncalli, Floyd Central, Columbus North and Providence among the competition. Only the top three teams advance to the state finals.

Madison has not escaped the regional since 2018 but Conner is confident that this team has the ability to do so.

“These guys have played that course a lot and they have seen the teams. They’re ready,” Conner said. “If we have one bad hole, we got to put it behind us because one or two strokes down there is so important. It’s so competitive. I don’t know what it’ll take (to advance) but probably 305 or better to get out.”

Southwestern’s Braxton Lewis hits an approach on No. 15 during the IHSAA Boys Golf Sectional at Sunrise Golf Course on Monday. Lewis led the Rebels with an 83.
